...RETELLING Retelling provides an opportunity for readers to process what they have read by organizing and explaining it to others. Retelling develops students' story grammar because they must identify crucial points and the support information. Retelling is important in determining a student's ability to comprehend the story. Students learn the elements in a story as they read, and they should be able to convey what happened in the story if they've comprehended it afterwards. To keep students engaged in the lesson I am using the "Tell Me Tower" stick.
